PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

FPM GROUP ENVIRONMENTAL ENGINEERING FIRM - NEW YORK, USA

I joined FPM Group, an environmental engineering firm, as a Bookkeeper in August 2001. Following the opening of a new branch and a positive evaluation of my performance, I was promoted to MIS / GIS Specialist. As my responsibilities evolved within information systems, I progressed into a Project Manager role, working on multiple contracts for the U.S. Department of Defense (DoD), one of the firm's primary clients. Responsible for structuring data and delivering large-scale reports (quarterly, mid-year, and annual) under strict deadlines. I also improved documentation and presentation processes by transitioning from manual formats to organized digital deliverables, enhancing clarity and professionalism. In a demanding environment, I ensured continuity of delivery, providing high-quality, reliable results under tight deadlines. Over more than 12 years, I developed strong expertise in Management Information Systems (MIS), data structuring, and the management and presentation of client-specific contracts.

AMERITANIA HOTEL - NEW YORK, USA

Upon arriving in New York, I worked as a freelance finance professional, managing accounts receivable and accounts payable for a real estate management company and later within an international hotel environment. At the Ameritania Hotel, I took the initiative to better understand operations by collaborating with the night management team. During a high-demand period, following an unexpected resignation, I stepped into the Night Manager role without prior direct experience. Handled full front desk operations during night shifts, managing a wide range of situations, including overbooking, late-night arrivals, and customer issues. This required rapid decision-making, problem-solving, and maintaining service standards under pressure. This experience demonstrates strong adaptability, rapid learning, and the ability to perform effectively in demanding environments.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES - OTTAWA, CANADA

After completing my finance training in the Canadian Armed Forces, I was assigned to CFB Ottawa. I was responsible for accounts payable and accounts receivable and played a key role in the implementation of a new financial system at the National Defence Medical Centre (NDMC) in Ottawa. Following deployment, I ensured the ongoing maintenance and support of the system. During the transition from manual to digital processes, I was selected to handle complex and high-risk payroll files, requiring detailed validation and reconciliation of data between legacy and new systems. Based on my performance and reliability, I was entrusted with responsibilities beyond my formal rank and acted on behalf of senior leadership when required. Critical elements were verified with supervisors to ensure accuracy and data integrity. I also represented base personnel on internal committees. I served in the Canadian Armed Forces for a period of 10 years.
